

'I give my tissue and my blood to medical research but no one tells me the results of this research or invites me to meetings where my data is being presented'
—patient delegate at 'use MY data' patient workshop

Healthcare conferences rarely give patients a voice.
Putting Patients First is a one-day, multidisciplinary, not-for-profit conference with a difference.

Putting Patients First

BERLIN
18 May 2018

Haus der Wirtschaft
Am Schillertheater 2
09:00 - 18:30

We aim to bring together all involved in the healthcare journey, including patients and their families/carers; healthcare professionals; pharma, medical device and digital health innovators; journalists; politicians; and speakers from Germany, the UK and across Europe. This event will be in English.

Session topics

- What patients want
- Let's talk: better communication in healthcare
- The psychology of illness: how to cope better
- What should participatory medicine look like?
- Do health apps help?
- Ill health in women: a special case?
- What annoys us: patients' and doctors' views (debate)
- Personalised medicine: current reality and future potential
- Harnessing patient experiences for science, healthcare and policy
- Partnering with the industry: patient involvement in research and education
- The changing face of palliative care
- My uninvited guest: perspectives on chronic disease in the young and old
- Patient-centred healthcare: can we afford it?

Fees

Standard delegate rate: €195

Bona fide patients, relatives and carers affected by significant chronic disease: €75
